

Task force to resume reorganization work soon

By Linda Reiff

Staff Writer

After delays and membership changes, the Reorganization Task Force is ready to meet again to tackle the organization problems of Cal Poly.

"I expect the first meeting will be early next month," said Tomlinson Fort, provost and chairman of the task force.

Fort said the committee was unable to meet over the summer, because most of the members were unavailable.

"Also, since last spring there have been some changes in Task force membership. Dean Langworthy (School of Science and Mathematics) left the school and Dean Hasslein (School of Architecture and Environmental Design) has taken his place on the committee," Fort said.

Rolf Rogers, management professor, has been added to the committee. The task force is also waiting for a new student representative, since Adam Littlefield, last year's representative, graduated.

Although the task force has not officially met since last spring, Fort said, "we've had some informal discussions."

He said many people have responded about the preliminary ideas made public last spring.

"We have received lots of mail. I have gotten a number of very thoughtful and creative suggestions from various people," Fort said.

On May 27 the task force issued a preliminary proposal to the faculty that called for reducing Cal Poly's seven schools to six and realigning 13 of the departments.

The plan suggests eliminating the School of Human Development and Education and transferring its departments to other schools. The School of Business would be renamed the School of Business and Professional Studies, with graphic communications, journalism, military science, construction, industrial technology and city and regional planning being included in this school.

The plan called for the creation of a forest resources department, while transferring the fishery and wildlife management program to the biological sciences department. The department of architectural engineering would be combined with civil engineering under the School of Engineering and Technology.

In the artistic area, the task force suggested moving the art department to the School of Architecture and Environmental Design, and possibly creating a new performing arts department.

These and other suggestions are what the task force hopes will help create interaction between schools and eliminate duplication.

Fort said the most reactions he has received are "obviously from areas that will be affected."

Fort wanted to clarify that the ideas made public last spring were only preliminary possibilities. "At this point in time no formal recommendations have been made to the President," he said.

Fort said the official recommendation might be made at the beginning of 1984. "Early in the winter quarter we would hope to have a recommendation to the President," he said.

"The President and I both feel it's very important that the whole business be concluded soon enough so that it may be implemented by the beginning of school next fall," Fort said.

Fort said he is still accepting suggestions from anyone. He prefers ideas in writing, so that he may share them with other task force members.

To be or not to be... future of summer quarter at Poly a question mark

by Becky Marr

Staff Writer

Summer quarter will be offered at Cal Poly in 1984, but funding beyond that is uncertain, said an administration official. State officials are still battling over funding for California universities, and Associate Vice President of Academic Affairs Malcolm Wilson said he is continuously meeting with them to plead Cal Poly's cause.

Wilson said he is using a summer services survey taken last spring to stress summer quarter as a regular part of Cal Poly's academic year. The survey, he said, showed 49.9 percent of students attend summer quarter. It also showed that 61 percent planned to attend the next summer quarter.

Wilson said he will present the report to state legislative budget committees December 15 in Sacramento.

"I have to get people to understand the larger issue," he explained. "It's a question of denying students access to education." He said students could be denied two ways. Those who could graduate after summer quarter would have to wait until after fall quarter if there were no summer classes and delayed graduation would further impact an already impacted campus.

And Cal Poly isn't the only campus with summer quarter uncertainties.

"There are four campuses in the (California State University) system that offer summer quarter. Each campus has a different use for it," Wilson said that Cal State, for example, has a huge part-time population, and their summer quarter allows students to continue an education and work.

Poly and the three other campuses are the only schools in the CSU system that offer a state-funded summer quarter. Three other universities require students to pay greatly increased tuition and the rest don't offer a summer quarter.

Wilson said he is putting together a report to show how summer quarter is different from summer session, a proposed alternative. Like summer quarter, summer session offers courses and classes for credit, but outside of the regular campus program. These courses are run by the Extended Education Office and although they are scheduled throughout the year, the majority of them are offered during the summer.

Summer session is an entirely separate entity from the regular summer quarter program. Because each course is paid for by the unit, the summer session program is self-supporting. But Wilson said this can be a financial burden for students.

"There are hidden costs in a student supported summer session," he said. "Fees for laboratory classes would be too high for students."

Cal Poly is the only university that has both summer quarter and summer session, Wilson said.

Opinion

Dear Readers:

The watchword for new reporters when covering events is "be objective."

It is unprofessional for news stories to carry the personal biases of the writers. News reporters' functions are simply to tell what happened and why, from as neutral a standpoint as possible. For that reason, newspapers strive to print articles written from a non-personal viewpoint.

The one exception is the opinion page. The opinion page performs a specific function: setting forth opinions and ideally backing them up with some solid reasons and facts.

Newspapers in America have always voiced the opinions of the people who published them. Early American printers were jailed by British authorities who didn't like the opinions in the little newspapers. With the rise of this country from 13 weak British colonies to a mighty world superpower, newspaper editors have continually evaluated, criticized and commented on current events.

What many people fail to understand is that the opinion page represents the newspaper's point of view. It is one opinion. Whether readers agree with it or not, the newspaper can express its viewpoint with freedom. It is a guaranteed right in our Constitution.

And, contrary to popular belief, it is not the responsibility of a newspaper to reflect the views of its readers. If this were true, the Washington Post would not have doggedly continued its editorial and news coverage of Watergate, a topic which the majority of Americans viewed as insignificant at the time.

By the same token, readers can reply in print with their own viewpoints. A good editorial page is one that not only presents the newspaper's point of view, but also allows its readers to criticize and challenge its opinions.

By presenting as many opinions as possible on a subject, readers will then be better informed to formulate their own opinions on the matter.

Therefore, it is not irresponsible journalism for a newspaper to print someone's opinion on something—whether it be an editorial, a letter to the editor or an editorial cartoon. Rather, it is a legitimate function of any newspaper, including the Mustang Daily.

The press and its opinions have always had opponents, whether they be the British government or readers with axes to grind. Newspapers by their very nature cannot please everybody. They will always have readers who don't like the content of this story or that, this editorial or that cartoon.

That is why the Mustang Daily encourages letters to the editor. No one opinion is more right than another. Every opinion is valid, and deserves to be expressed.

In a nutshell...

We're pissing everybody off. That's good because this is the sign of a healthy and successful opinion page. If we didn't provoke opinions, we'd be doing something wrong.

Keep writing.

Cartoonists take cheapshots at Marines, president

Editor:

I have always had a great deal of respect for political cartoonists. They have the unique talent to display a political issue in the most direct and straight-to-the-point method. The great political artists have contributed as much to public opinion during the existence of this country as any number of newspaper journalists. The one thing that I admire most is their ability to portray their opinions with class and professionalism. The Mustang Daily cartoonists appear to be lacking of these qualities.

They not only display the issues as gross misconceptions, but they have no hint of tactful expression. When all of us should have been mourning the tragic loss of American men in Lebanon, the Daily printed a cartoon that depicted President Reagan rejoicing over the carnage and destruction caused by the subversive terrorist elements. It seemed as if he was the one that initiated the whole affair for the sake of re-election. This was not only a marked misrepresentation of the issues at hand, but a totally irresponsible "cheap shot" at the president.

Only the Daily cartoonists decided not to stop there. They opted to defame every Marine that has died in the service of their country since 1776. This drawing stated, "When it can't be done, America calls the Marines. MARINES. Maybe you can be one of us. The few. The proud. The many. The dead."

"When it can't be done, America calls the Marines?" By what stretch of the imagination can this statement possibly be true? If the Marines Corps had its troops spread across the globe in places such as Afghanistan, Africa, and Central America, countering all the difficult diplomatic situations with force, I would agree. But we are not in these theatres of political unrest as a viable military force fighting out diplomatic battles. We are in Lebanon as part of a four-nation peacekeeping force. We are in Grenada, uncovering vast clandestine communist military supply dumps and sending home our medical students that kissed American soil when they finally reached it.

The Marines are not the tip of the superpower America's sword that is thrust into all areas she feels malignant. They are a force of freedom to be used in specialized situations for specialized purposes that affect this country, its people and its allies. I suppose the cartoonist thought he was doing this college community a service by his artistic creation. But his only accomplishment was to mock the brave young men that have loyally paid the supreme sacrifice in defense of this country's continuing struggle for liberty and freedom.

Daily opinion content: false, morbid and disgusting

Editor:

After reading the Letters section of the Oct. 26 Daily, I was pleased to see that I was not the only one who was disgusted by the cartoon on Oct. 25, and outraged by the Daily's apparent lack of journalistic responsibility. This poses two problems in my mind and thus warrants this response.

First, I agree with Mr. Hunt et. al., about the disrespectful portrayal of the tragic massacre in Beirut. The editor, however, feels that the cartoon conveyed some meaning to those deaths. Maybe so, but that meaning was anything but tasteful, respectful, sensitive, or productive. I feel sorry for anyone here who had relatives or friends involved in this tragedy and had to see that horrible cartoon. Regardless of that, everyone felt terrible about the news from Beirut, and I certainly don't recall hearing anything from President Reagan that would indicate his only concern was for his re-election. I can understand the "artist's" feelings of anger. But I would hope he or she would also have some feelings of compassion and be able to express their disapproval with some respect for the victims of such a tragedy, the brave men who died in doing what their country asked of them because doing just that was important to them. The editor denied credit for the cartoon, although he said he would have liked to accept. Well, if he didn't draw that monstrosity, who did? I could find no signature anywhere.

This brings me to my second point. At the bottom of each opinion page is the Daily policy. The last sentence there says, "Unsigned editorials reflect the viewpoint of the Mustang Daily Editorial Board." Can I therefore assume that this holds true for unsigned cartoons as well, since there is no mention of a name being withheld on request? The editor denied credit for that morbid piece of junk, but as editor, shouldn't responsibility fall on him? If that grotesque drawing "reflects the Board's opinion," then I can not ethically print what I think of your viewpoint, but four-letter words do come to mind. Now, it is obvious to just about everyone what the political biases of the Daily are, but I would think even you "journalists" would have better taste than that.

Finally, I see this whole problem as just one example of the Daily's lack of journalistic responsibility. One other question has bothered me for some time: What is the "Opinion" section doing on page two anyway? Since you don't run the "Newline" section with the current events from the world, nation, or state until page eight or nine, it appears that you "journalists" feel that your opinions (and those of others) are more important than reporting the FACTUAL news. Not only did you run that particularly morbid cartoon on Oct. 25, but you even plugged it on the front page!

Now, I'm not a journalism major, but something seems seriously WRONG here! All the professional newspapers that I have ever thumbed through have the editorial page on the back, in the final section, or somewhere in the middle at least. I'm beginning to wonder what they're teaching all of you in the journalism department and how well all of you are doing.

I know this response is rather long, but it has been brewing for quite awhile. I hope I haven't wasted my time. So prove me (and the rest of us) that you people DO have a minimal sense of journalistic responsibility (and the guts) to print this criticism.

Marianne Smith

Editor:

Once again you have disgraced the Daily by publishing a cartoon that dishonors the United States Marine Corps and its fallen members. As a United States Marine and a Cal Poly student, I am both shocked and outraged by the disgusting cartoon in the Oct. 27 Mustang Daily.

As a civilian you cannot begin to understand the complete professionalism and dedication with which Marines carry out their missions all over the world. It will suffice to say that there is no finer fighting force in the world. Whether or not the Marines should be in Lebanon is not the question; I will not attempt to discuss foreign policy. It is your obligation to publish opinions without rendering disrespect for men who have died unjustly, yet in service to their country.

I know that the Marines in Lebanon grieve, as I do, for our fallen comrades. I cannot express the feelings that only a Marine can feel for the death of a fellow Marine.

I, and all the patriotic students on this campus, will not soon forget the tasteless way in which you have handled this sorrowful incident.

Justin M. Wisdom

Editor:

I have a serious gripe about the quality of this newspaper. I find it utterly disgusting at the type of political cartoons that are printed in this paper. For example in the Thursday Oct. 27 issue, the article Domino theory revamped was accompanied by a cartoon referring to the Marine soldiers who died in combat recently. The politics of right or wrong, whether or not they should be there is not my point. My point is simply this: those men died in the service of our country and you have the nerve to make fun of their deaths. Right or wrong, they deserve more respect than that. How would you feel lying in a foreign battlefield wounded and about to die knowing the folks back home are laughing and making fun of you?

In conclusion, I feel that American servicemen that died in combat paid the supreme sacrifice in service to their country and repaying them with this type of journalistic backstabbing is totally unjustified.

Alan Garratt

Editor:

Once again we would like to reiterate our displeasure with the nature of the political cartoons which your newspaper has published concerning the Beirut tragedy. No newspaper mindful of the emotions of the friends and relatives of those Marines killed and wounded in the bomb blast would have printed such callous material. Regardless of the political point these cartoons were attempting to make, their very nature only serves to inflame, and not inform. Perhaps we should attempt to detach ourselves from the mudslinging surrounding these deaths and discuss the issues behind our involvement in this area.

May we suggest that in the future the Mustang Daily require cartoonists to sign their work so as to promote responsible journalism.

Daily protected despite errors

Editor:

In response to the Oct. 27 editorial by the Mustang Daily Editorial Board concerning the Invasion of Grenada: I feel it would be in the best interests of the students of Cal Poly if you got the facts straight before you publicly stated your opinions. The editorial titled "Domino theory revamped" contained many errors and falsehoods.

To begin with the invasion was not carried out by 1,900 Marines, but was a joint effort by U.S. Army Rangers, U.S. Marines, elements of the U.S. 82nd Airborne Division and troops from 6 eastern Caribbean nations. This multinational force was used after the United States and the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States decided it was necessary to quell the internal unrest in Grenada.

In the editorial you stated that the head of St. George's University Medical School, Dr. Charles Modica, saw no need for the invasion. You failed to mention, or wait for the facts to come out, that he changed his opinion. When Dr. Modica was informed of all the facts he stated, "...I have changed by mind" and "...I do feel that President Reagan was justified."

You then referred to 146 marines in Lebanon, these Marines were also referred to in disgusting editorial in your paper. Did you bother to find out the number of marines killed or that they were there to try to instill peace in Lebanon?

Maybe if you stated the facts more accurately and refrained from the use of cliches, the opinions based on these facts would carry more weight.

Alan J. Moore

Editor:

Once again the Daily has shown itself to be asinine and shallow. The cartoon depicting a recruiting poster was not only uncalled for, but has insulted every serviceman and veteran this country has. You imply that anyone who joins the service (marines or otherwise) is a suicidal idiot. We are not! We realized when we joined that the possibility of death exists, and believe me, the thought of death is frightening indeed, but still we enlisted. Why? Because we believe in our country and what it stands for. It makes me sick to my stomach to think that our servicemen might have to fight to protect people like you who not only have no understanding of patriotism but apparently don't care about it either.

If a situation arose in which you were in danger, you would be the first to say to those Marines, "Protect me, although I've criticized you guys in the past, protect me now, for I need you," and they would, because you are an AMERICAN (though I wonder if you really are).

Readers: Daily is insulting, disgustingly biased

Editor:

I was extremely offended by your morbid and insulting cartoon that was in the Oct. 25 issue of the Mustang Daily. Your cartoon on Oct. 27 made the earlier one look innocent. The Mustang Daily is disgustingly biased in its interpretation of world events. It is unfortunate that the Mustang Daily is a product of so-called "responsible journalists."

Never before have I seen such tactless, one-sided journalism as in those issues. Did you even stop to consider how the families, friends and supporters of the Marines might interpret your cartoons?

The bombing of the Marine complex was a savage attack on the United States, and that means all of us. I feel your cartoons rank at about the same intellectual level as the terrorists themselves. Why don't you join them in their fight against peace and stability in the region. Remember, "birds of a feather flock together!"

I sure hope you aren't a Journalism Major. The opinion you expressed in "Domino theory revamped" was based on so much non-truth and fallacy that I felt compelled to address the issue.

First: The Prime Minister you alluded to was not from the Dominican Republic, but from the island of Dominica. At least you were right about the fact that she was from an island.

Second: You say it's illogical for the U.S. to intervene in an "internal conflict" of a nation. Do you think the 20 Soviet advisors were in Grenada to work on their tans? Were the 1,000+ Cuban "construction workers" using the Soviet built ground to air missiles Missile Bunkers and AK-47's to hunt ducks before using them against our Marines? We responded to Communist terrorism being perpetrated against the people of Grenada, and the American citizens living there.

Third: The dean of St. George's

Editor:

The most predictable aftermath of the U.S. invasion of Grenada was all the mushy, slushy, misty-eyed, thoroughly-nauseating drivel from the liberal contingent.

The issues involved are nothing less than America's right to use force to defend its own long-term national interest. "The United States doesn't invade weak countries and depose their governments," our own Mustang Daily declared Thursday. "The Russians do that in places like Afghanistan, Czechoslovakia and Poland."

Apparently, according to the Mustang editorial, such use of force should be the sole prerogative of Soviet bloc countries. Destabilization of governments and direct military aggression at opportune moments have always been standard policy of communist countries toward non-communist countries — and sometimes toward other communist countries. All the while, each communist government has held its own sovereignty to be absolute, inviolate and "sacred," as one Soviet spokesman said in justification of

Editor:

This letter is in response to the two political cartoons on Monday, 10-24-83 and Thursday, 10-27-83. The former portrayed President Reagan as Nero in midst of the dead Marines in Lebanon while the latter showed an outline of a dead marine in the form of a recruiting poster.

Those editorials were distasteful and done at an inappropriate time. With so many Americans grieving over the tragic bombing of the Marine complex especially the family and friends of the dead Marines, someone has the audacity to ridicule the president as well as the U.S. Marines.

This is a time of support. We must stand together. Our involvement in Lebanon is a peaceful one. We were asked by the Lebanese government to help maintain peace while they worked out their internal problems. If anyone is to be blamed for the killing of over 200 Marines it would have to be those radicals who would rather spend their energy fighting fanatically and terroristically rather than channeling it

Medical School based his opinion that the students were safe on information fed to him by the same group of terrorists who had murdered the Prime Minister of Grenada and eight of his cabinet members the week before. Since the dean's original statement was made, he has since made a public 180° turn and now supports the decision to rescue the students. This was done after receiving information from non-communist sources (i.e., your government).

Fourth: The 10,000-foot airstrip being built on Grenada obviously isn't a direct threat to the security of the U.S., but did you ever consider the large percentage of our petroleum needs which come to us from the island refineries is just off of Venezuela?

Your lack of deductive reasoning and fact collecting should certainly exclude you from a journalistic career. The cartoon that accompanied your opinion column was, predictably, tasteless.

Russ Park

shooting down the Korean airliner.

Grenada was very much involved in facilitating Soviet policy by allowing Soviets to build military bases on Grenada so that the Soviets can project its military power over a wider area in the Caribbean.

The question is whether America should abide by the communist double standard on the use of violence. The liberal-left position has always been that we should. They have always held that if only we would unilaterally disarm and turn belly up before all threats, immediate and long term, then we would all live in a nice peaceful world.

The Reagan administration decision not to tolerate such a double standard at our own expense rests on firm ethical grounds. The U.S. is in no way morally obligated to observe any rule or limit that is not followed by its adversaries.

Thus as long as communist countries continue their aggressive policies, they have no prerogative to assert, no rights to invoke, no sovereignty that requires our respect.

Jim Austin

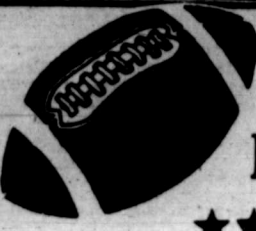

towards a more peaceful means at the table of the peace talks in Geneva this month.

Those in America who protest and say we must mind our own business must remember that isolationism was proven to be ineffective back in the beginning of WWII.

We say that we are caring people and idealistically we would like to see peace throughout the world. Therefore, we must back up this idealism. We must give the Lebanese government a chance to make peace for the sake of the women and children and the entire populace of Lebanon whose lives have been torn apart by this atrocity called war.

So I ask, instead of protesting and degrading the U.S., why don't we join together and pray for those families of the dead Marines and Lebanese militia; pray for the souls lost in the fighting both American and Lebanese; pray for those who are trying to maintain peace and for those who are trying to thwart it so that they may realize that killing is not a means for solving a problem; finally, let's pray for peace.

From country to rock 'n roll S.L.O. offer dancing variety

by Kathy Messinger
Staff Writer

Dancing in San Luis Obispo seems to be the favorite past time of many Poly students.

Besides the essentials of being seen at The Graduate on Thursday or standing in line at Tortilla Flats on Friday or Saturday nights, there are lots of special events at these or Shenandoah and Yancy McFadden's, two other dance spots, in SLO.

Yancy McFadden's 1772 Calle Joaquin, offers a disc jockey who plays a variety of rock and pop Tuesday through Sunday. Dancing at Yancy's is enhanced by a spectacular view of San Luis Obispo city lights.

Anyone over 21 is welcome at the hilltop dance site. There is a $2 cover charge on Fridays and Saturdays.

Down the slope from Yancy's is Shenandoah, 1560 Los Osos Valley Rd. This S.L.O. hot-spot provides live music for dancing almost every night of the week.

For the month of November Shenandoah will present Al Millan and the Protectors, Oct. 31-Nov. 1, The Groove Kings 2-6, the News 7-8, The Heaters 9-13, The Eighties 14-15, Jo Tokyo 16-20, The Dynatones 21-22, The Shake 23-27, Ray Band 28-29 and Bubba and the Road Master 30-Dec. 4. Shenandoah has a Happy Hour from 12 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Cover charge is $2 Friday and Saturday only over 21 welcome.

An always-happening spot is the Graduate, located on the outskirts of town, 990 Industrial Way. The Graduate, famous for its "grad. burgers," dubs Mondays as "country music night" and Wednesdays as "new wave night."

On Nov. 13 the Graduate will present the Plimsoules and a "Killian's Night" on Nov. 15. On Nov. 20 and 22, The Graduate will host a "Minor Madness Night," allowing anyone 18 and over through the door. On regular Friday and Saturday nights there is a $1 cover charge, and only over 21's allowed.

The popularly-crowded Tortilla Flats, on Nipomo, presents reggae and ska night on Mondays, rhythm and blues on Tuesdays, ladies' night on Wednesdays, and live bands on Thursdays. Rotation of live bands include Chaser, Plumber and City Limits.

On Friday and Saturdays the top 40 hits of the week are played by a D.J. A $1 cover charge is now must. Again, only those over 21 can be admitted.

THURSDAY NIGHT LIVE

Some Windsong members have performed with well-knowns Bette Midler, Frank Zappa, John Davidson, Carmen McRae and Melissa Manchester. Tickets are $4 for students and $5 for general admission, available at the U.U. ticket office, Boo Boo Records and Cheap Thrills. Tickets are $1 more at the door.

Poly kickers tie Pomona, then beat Riverside, 4-2

by Kathy Messinger
Staff Writer

At home in Mustang Stadium the Cal Poly men's soccer team tied Cal Poly Pomona 1-1 in double overtime on Friday and swept past UC Riverside 4-2 on Saturday. The Mustangs are now 5-4-3 in California Collegiate Athletic Association play.

"Pomona plays a tough, very vicious game," said Mustang head coach Wolfgang Gartner, "they didn't allow for much passing play."

The Mustangs were able to hold their own, though, against the Broncos style of play, and at the end of the first half both teams left the field scoreless. Most of the game's action took place in front of the Bronco goal, as tempers and physical play both escalated on the field.

The first score of the game came in the second half when Curtis Apsey sailed the ball past the Bronco goalie, the ball entering the outside right corner of the net. The score came on a penalty kick after the Mustangs were fouled inside the penalty box.

The Broncos scored on a fast pass that shot into the Mustang goal and left goalie Don Aguiar on the grass after he made a dive for the ball. The score came minutes after a Mustang substitution. "They took advantage of the situation, substitutions slow down our game and it takes the players a while to adjust to the new man," said Gartner.

The Mustangs were able to keep their defense strong during both overtime periods. Aguiar was playing strong and was able to keep the Broncos from scoring. The game ended tied 1-1.

Against Riverside the Mustangs were able to show their stuff. "I don't think we were ever close to losing this game," said Gartner. "It was an easier game, we came through and just out-played them."

The Mustangs, though they had many opportunities to score, were unlucky in not finding the net. The Highlanders got the first score of the game as a player broke free in front of the Mustang goal and propelled the ball past Aguiar.

After the Highlander's score the Mustangs came back to score after a foul call. Apsey made the goal with a kick to the right corner of the goal. Within minutes the Mustangs had another break, but the goal was called back due to an offside call against the Mustangs. At half the score was tied 1-1.

David Shiverly, substituted after the half, made his first score of the season two minutes into the game. Shiverly's score came off a good Mustang pass, an open shot leaving the Highlanders' goalie sprawled on the ground.

The Highlanders second goal came on an open kick that sailed over the Mustang goalie's head. Robert Clark was at the goal position for the Mustangs after substituting for Aguiar just after the half.

The Mustangs again had a goal called back, but within minutes freshman Jeff Meyer scored for the Mustangs, making it 3-2. Late in the second half Mike Beebe scored for the Mustangs after receiving a cross field pass from Alex Crozier. The Mustangs held on for a final score of 4-2.

"Neither of the game scores this weekend reflected the way we played, we should have had high scoring games. We were unlucky to tie yesterday's game," Gartner stated the chances were there in both games. Overall we played well," said Gartner.

The Mustangs will play their last game of the season on the road Wednesday against Cal State Dominguez Hills.

Poly can't flag down Fresno St.

By David Kraft
Staff Writer

It may be a cliché, but Cal Poly head coach Jim Sanderson summed up Saturday afternoon's Mustang-Fresno State game in fine style when he said, "They took advantage of their scoring opportunities and we didn't."

That fact, coupled with a multitude of Mustang injuries and some key Poly mistakes led to a 30-7 Fresno State victory before 25,712 fans in Fresno's ultra-modern Doghouse.

Despite the lopsided final, Sanderson didn't think the score was indicative of the game. "I thought the kids played gallantly," he said. "I'm not at all embarrassed by our football team. I was proud of them."

Only some crucial Poly turnovers and drive-stopping penalties kept the Bulldogs from sweating out the win on an overcast, sometimes rainy afternoon. The Mustangs committed five miscues, all at midfield or in Fresno State territory. Three of the giveaways turned directly into Bulldog points.

The Mustangs couldn't afford such generosity with a defense decimated by injuries. Two-thirds of the Poly defensive front, Pepe Prud'homme and Paul Sverchek, are out for the season with knee injuries, so Sanderson and defensive coordinator Chris Smeland had to perform a juggling act just to field a team.

"We only had 15 defensive players total and we've got three people playing that haven't played before," said Sanderson. "We had to play just straight up, standard defense. We didn't have one blitz all day."

That gave the Bulldogs time to open things up offensively. A predominately passing ballclub, Fresno State used a balanced, ball-control attack to eat the clock against the Mustangs. The Dogs ran for 212 yards and threw for 211 while holding the ball for over 36 minutes.

Sheer lack of numbers eventually caught up with the Mustangs, but Sanderson was encouraged with the defensive effort. "They got 30 points and we got seven and I didn't think their defense played any better than

Poly spikers scare up a couple of wins over the weekend

by Dave Wilcox
Sports Editor

It was Halloween weekend and Cal Poly women's volleyball head coach Mike Wilton had to be a little frightened glancing down his bench during matches with Loyola-Marymount and San Jose State in the Main Gym.

What, with starting middle blockers-outside hitters Ellen Bugalski and Terri Parling, and middle hitter Tammy Schroeder, all hobbling in street clothes with foot injuries, it wasn't going to be an easy trick defeating 11-ranked San Jose, who had already beaten Poly once this season.

But those Mustangs who were healthy provided Wilton, and particularly the fans at the San Jose match, with quite a treat, devouring Loyola Friday night 15-0, 15-7, and then coming back Saturday night to upset the Spartans in four games, 15-2, 8-15, 15-9, 15-11.

The two victories elevated Poly's season record above the .500 mark to 13-11, the first time the team has had a winning percentage since it was 5-4 in September.

Wilton agreed the two wins could prove to be the turning point of the Lady Mustangs' season, "considering the time of the year." But he added, "the win in Santa Barbara (Oct. 18 versus the Gauchos) was the real corner-turner" coming on the heels of the recent rash of injuries.

Including the UCSB win, the Mustangs have now won five of their last six matches, losing only to fifth-ranked USC.

But if the win over UCSB turned the corner for Poly, its victory over San Jose, 18-5 before the match, got them steaming down the backstretch.

"Tonight's match reminded me a lot of the UOP match," Wilton remarked, referring to a four-game loss at Poly Oct. 7. "(It) could've gone either way also."

At the outset of the San Jose match, everything was going the Mustangs' way, as Poly's stiff defensive block and aggressive offense led to a 15-2 rout in game one.

But, as they have done in a few important matches this year, the Lady Mustangs opened game two with a noticeable lapse of concentration and intensity, falling behind quickly 6-0. The Mustangs scrambled back to close the gap to 9-6, before falling 15-8.

Behind the hitting of sophomore Lynn Kessler and some steady play from freshman middle hitter Carol Tschasar, who nearly made Wilton forget the walking wounded at the end of his bench, the Mustangs regained their firepower in games three and four.

"We didn't lose it," Wilton commented. "One or two (players) maybe thought about it, but then thought better of it."

Kessler, who for the weekend swatted 22 kills in 45 attempts with only six errors, against the Spartans put down 15 of 29 for a sizzling .374 hitting mark.

"Kessler was nails," summed up Wilton.

Wilton wasn't at a loss for praise for Tschasar, either, observing her consistent performance throughout the match. "Carol was a model of proficiency in the back row."

In the pivotal third game, both teams seemed to sense the winner would be tough to beat in the fourth game, and entertained the crowd with some inspired, if at times frantic, volleyball.

Poly raced to a 6-2 lead, capped when two Spartans allowed a Mustang serve to fall untouched between them. But the visitors roared back to knot the game at nine-each, led by All-American candidate Lisa Ice, who finished the match with a sparkling .353 hitting percentage, blasting 13 kills in 34 attempts with only one error.

From there, though, the Mustangs blanked the Spartans, winning 15-9. In the deciding game, Poly jumped ahead 12-8, saw San Jose close the deficit to 12-11, and then scored the final two points on Lisa Bohm's service ace and Tschasar's block.

All-American outside hitter Sandy Aughinbaugh also had a good match, chipping in 13 kills in 33 attempts for a .242 mark.

After the match, Wilton reflected somewhat positively on the injuries his team has suffered, commenting he thought they may have loosened up some of his younger players. The players might have been thinking, Wilton said, "maybe if I screw up a little bit I'll still be in here."

Next for the Mustangs is the tough UCLA National Invitational Volleyball Tournament this Friday. The tourney traditionally weighs heavily in seeding for the playoffs, and the Mustangs pool includes 7th ranked San Diego State, Cal and Louisiana State University.

Poly's final home match of the year will be Nov. 14 versus UCSB.

Starting for a Poly front line nearly decimated by injuries, Stacy Stowell, here attempting a kill versus San Jose, helped the Mustangs to two wins this weekend.

ours did," he said.

Fresno State quarterback Kevin Sweeney had ample time to seek out his receivers. "We did not put very much pressure on Sweeney at all," Sanderson said. Still, the freshman phenom hit only nine of 20 throws for 155 yards and two touchdowns, a tribute to a tired Mustang secondary.

Sweeney's number one target, flanker Larry Willis, hauled in five passes for 101 yards and a first quarter touchdown. Additionally, a spectacular 80-yards Sweeney to Willis connection was called back by a penalty.

In fact, much of the game was called back by penalty. Referee Hazen McNinch and his PCAA crew walked off 18 penalties for 188 yards, and countless other flags were refused. On one occasion, the Mustangs were in business at the 'Dog 26 only to have two straight penalties move them back into their own territory. Only a slow first period (two flags) kept the officials from running up totally yardage numbers comparable to the teams.

The Cal Poly offense had some big yardage numbers (399), but was unable to find the end zone except for a 40 yard jaunt by Brian Gutierrez. Quarterback Jeff Byars, brilliant a week ago, was pilfered four times by the Bulldogs. "He (Byars) showed his inexperience," Sanderson said. "He definitely threw when he shouldn't have." On the day, Byars was 15 for 27 for 242 yards.

Tailback Gutierrez enjoyed another productive afternoon, dashing for 152 yards on 27 carries. His touchdown, which brought the Mustangs to within 10 after halftime, was a great effort. Gutierrez SLANTED off left tackle, broke free from a pair of hits and outran the secondary with a burst of speed. That was all the offense wrote, however.

The Bulldogs opened the scoring four-and-a-half minutes in when Sweeney hit Willis for an 18-yard touchdown. The drive started after Curtis Allen intercepted Byars at midfield. Rocky Costello added the extra point.

Fresno State capitalized again on a controversial Mustang turnover. Fullback Jim Hawkins was hit over the middle, and Sanderson along with many observers thought he was down. The officials ruled otherwise, and seven plays later, Costello had increased the margin with a 29-yard field goal.

Three minutes later, the 'Dogs made it 17-0 on a 13-yard pass from Sweeney to Joey Little. Costello again converted.

Following Gutierrez' spectacular run making it 17-7, Costello added another field goal, this one a 38 yarder midway through the third stanza.

The Bulldogs sealed the win with a pair of fourth quarter scores. Lavale Thomas scored on a 2-yard run early in the period, and Costello finalized the result with a 27-yard field goal.

The Mustangs, now 4-4, play their remaining contests in Mustang Stadium, starting next week with Southern Connecticut. Game time is 1 p.m.

Mustang Daily — Scott Swanson

Mustang running back Brian Gutierrez enjoyed a big day, though Poly didn't, gaining 152 yards versus Fresno St.
